

Anna is a current Paralympic cyclist and represents the Paralympics New Zealand Athlete Council on the ALN board. Currently, she devotes herself full-time to cycling and aims to qualify for the Paris 2024 Paralympic Games. Alongside her athletic pursuits, Anna is pursuing a master's degree in Sport Management.

After a significant back/spinal injury, Anna joined the New Zealand paracycling high-performance program in 2019. She has competed in three World Championships and participated in the Tokyo 2020 Paralympic Games. Prior to her cycling career, Anna spent five years as a student athlete in rowing at Oregon State University, earning accolades as a three-time West regional team honouree and All American.

Anna brings professional experience in youth work, mental health, community engagement, health promotion, and public speaking. She recognizes the importance of sport in the lives of all New Zealanders and is committed to serving, advocating, and representing the interests of athletes, particularly the Paralympic athlete community.
