

Casey is a former player and manager of the New Zealand Black Sox Men's Softball team, and he brings a wealth of experience in start-up ventures, business growth, commercial strategy, and governance to the ALN. He has played pivotal roles in successful businesses such as Neighbourly, GrabOne, Orchestra, and currently leads the global expansion for First Table. Additionally, Casey consults for corporate and NGO groups, leveraging his expertise.

Beyond his professional endeavours, Casey is an enthusiastic sporting parent who actively coaches in local football and athletics clubs. When time permits, he enjoys playing golf. Casey resides in the north of Auckland with his wife and two children.

Casey's goal for the ALN is to cultivate more resilient and sustainable athletes who understand how to leverage available support and commercialize their unique assets. Drawing from his experience in aspirational sports, Casey is passionate about ensuring that athletes in both prominent and smaller sports can reach their full potential.
